GENERAL INFORMATION AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR COMPLETING AN APPLICATION FOR ADMISSION TO THE DOCTORAL PROGRAM

The application process for admission to the Doctoral Program of The Sanville Institute is divided into three parts.

Part I: Submit the following materials:

1. Face Sheet
2. Curriculum Vitae
3. Personal Statement and Self-Assessment
4. Transcripts of graduate and undergraduate school records forwarded directly to The Sanville Institute from the institution.
5. Three letters of reference. Three letters from the Dean of the Institute to your prospective references, with Release of Information Agreements, are included with the application forms in this Appendix. Select references who can provide a relevant view of your functioning as a professional person. At least one of the three references should be a licensed clinical practitioner. Address the Institute's letter to each of your references. Fill in the name of the reference and sign the release at the bottom of the form for each of your three references. Send this letter to your references directly, requesting that they respond to the Institute within three weeks.
6. $150 non-refundable application fee.

Forms and guidelines for Part I are included in this Appendix. Deadlines for filing the materials of for Part I are May 15 for fall admission and October 1 for winter admission. Applications for spring admission require special permission from the Dean. When permission is granted, Part I application materials for spring admission are due no later than January 20.

Upon receipt of all documentation, your application will be reviewed and evaluated by two independent raters. Those deemed ineligible or not qualified will be notified. Those deemed eligible and qualified will be asked to participate in Part II of the application process, the submission of clinical material.

Part II: Submit clinical case summaries of two cases that you are carrying or have carried.

The purpose is to convey a sense of your approach to practice. The first sample of your work should be chosen from a fairly long-term case. A summary or overview with selected fragments of process, or a process recording of one interview, would be appropriate. A suitable process recording includes comments on the theoretical basis for some of your interventions, should reflect your use of the transference, and may target countertransferential feelings that you found helpful in understanding the client.

We will be interested in the way you conceptualize your work and in your integration of theory with practice. You may select a case that represents your best work or you may prefer to present an unsuccessful session from which you learned something.

The second sample of clinical work can be any of the following: 1) A different long-term case; 2) brief therapy; 3) crisis intervention; 4) family therapy; 5) group therapy; or 6) case consultation with a person under your supervision about a clinical case. In the second sample you could use one or several interviews.

We ask that you send four copies of each summary.

Once the clinical case summaries have been received by the Institute, all of the application materials submitted in Parts I and II are reviewed and evaluated by the Admissions Committee and the Dean. Any applicant deemed to be qualified will be invited to attend the Admissions Conference.

Part III: The Admissions Conference.

The Admissions Conference is a group experience that includes all of the applicants together with the Admissions Committee. The Admissions Conference is designed to replicate in a small way the format and spirit of the Colloquium, the major group learning component of the program. In the group, each applicant will present one of the cases submitted, and the other applicants will be invited to participate in a clinical discussion of the case. Following the Admissions Conference, applicant is interviewed individually.

When there are too few applicants to have an Admissions Conference, the Admissions Committee will interview applicants individually, and the case summaries will serve as a point of departure in the interview.

There is an additional $100 non-refundable fee for participation in the Admissions Conference. Admissions decisions are announced within one week of the Admissions Conference.
